ORDER

Before the Court is defendant Robert S. Duran, Jr.'s ("Duran") Motion Dismiss, filed October 14, 2014. On November 03, 2014, plaintiffs filed their response. Based upon the parties' submissions, the Court makes its determination.

I. Introduction¹

On September 18, 2014, plaintiffs Hector Alejandro Villasana Castillo ("Villasana") and H & R Enterprises, LLC ("H&R")² filed the instant action against defendant Duran and defendants Clover, Duran, Thomas & Vorndran, LLP and Stuart & Clover, PLLC (collectively, "Stuart & Clover") alleging claims for professional negligence/legal malpractice, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract, and fraud. Plaintiffs allege that they hired defendant Duran, a then partner of Stuart & Clover, and Stuart & Clover to represent them in an arbitration matter before the American Arbitration Association in Dallas, Texas, involving H&R's dispute with a Texas firm, Landmark Structures I, LP ("Landmark").

On May 18, 2010, without the consent and permission of Villasana, Duran prepared a "Durable Power of Attorney and Designation of Guardian" ("POA") making Kimberly Joyce ("Joyce"), Villasana's then wife, Villasana's guardian and attorney-in-fact. This transaction took place in Stuart & Clover's office and was witnessed by the firm's partners Matthew L. Thomas and Duran. At the time of this transaction, Villasana was half-way across the State of Oklahoma on a job site. However, despite Villasana's absence, this POA contained a forged signature purporting to be Villasana's. The POA was then signed by Joyce and notarized by Tina L. Sim, a notary at Stuart & Clover. The next day, on May 19, 2010, during the pendency of the arbitration and after the signing of the POA without Villasana's knowledge and consent, Villasana was picked up by Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers and deported back to Mexico. Following his deportation, Villasana put Joyce in charge of H&R's business operations in the United States while Villasana continued to manage H&R from Mexico. Although Villasana did not transfer or give Joyce any amount of ownership, share, or membership in H&R, on the same day of Villasana's deportation, without his knowledge, Joyce signed an Application to Reinstate H&R with the Oklahoma Secretary of State ("OSOS"), naming herself as a manger of H&R and its registered service agent.

On April 27, 2011, Durant negotiated, and Joyce signed, a partial settlement on behalf of H&R with Landmark in the amount of approximately $635,000.00 – which Landmark paid to Stuart & Clover on behalf of H&R.³ However, a dispute over approximately $300,000.00 remained outstanding between H&R and Landmark. On November 14, 2012, the Arbitrator awarded H&R $66,753.17⁴ on these remaining unsettled claims. However, on or about January 9, 2013, Landmark filed a lawsuit against H&R for breach of contract after Duran failed to respond to Landmark's counsel's notice of additional warranty related claims against H&R, which Duran also failed to communicate to plaintiffs. As Duran was the attorney and registered service agent for H&R, the Petition was served on Duran on January 9, 2013, and he again failed to notify plaintiffs. As a result, Landmark obtained a default judgment in its favor since H&R had not responded. Because the default judgment amount was greater than the arbitration award amount Landmark owed to H&R, H&R never received the remaining arbitration award. Moreover, as H&R's registered agent, Duran failed to keep H&R in good standing with OSOS by failing to file H&R's annual certificates on at least three occasions in 2011, 2012, and 2013. In addition, in July 2012, Duran filed another Application to Reinstate H&R with OSOS, named himself as the registered service agent, and appointed himself as manager of H&R – actions taken without Villasana's knowledge and approval.

After obtaining the forged POA, Joyce used it to withdraw funds from H&R's business account and embezzled and concealed some or all of the unaccounted funds from the partial Landmark settlement and other H&R income. Villasana did not discover the forgery and use of the POA until early 2013. Despite Villasana's numerous attempts to contact Duran and obtain the status of the arbitration case, Duran failed to properly update Villasana that the arbitration had concluded and the Arbitrator had issued a final order in H&R's favor. To the contrary, Duran represented to Villasana that the arbitration was not fully concluded, there was no final order entered and no determination of how much money was owed to H&R.

Moreover, Villasana contends that Duran helped Joyce commit further fraud by referring Joyce to Duran's close friend to serve as an attorney to obtain a fraudulent default divorce on grounds that Joyce did not know the whereabouts of her husband despite her daily contact with Villasana. Villasana contends that despite Duran's knowledge of this divorce, Duran failed to communicate this to Villasana. As a result, using the fraudulent POA, Joyce transferred to herself all of Villasana and H&R's finances, property and other assets, including Villasana's vehicle and residence, which also served as H&R's place of operation.

Plaintiffs contend that as a result of these activities, they have lost over $860,000.00. Not knowing Duran's role in these activities, Villasana asked Duran to take numerous remedial measures, such as to help him revoke or rescind the POA, attempt to determine the extent of the financial damage done by Joyce, and investigate and intervene with Joyce in regard to the H&R financial documents. Duran agreed to prepare a Replevin Petition to file against Joyce on behalf of plaintiffs in order to recover H&R's financial documents. Duran did not file or even attempt to file said documents.

Accordingly, because of Duran's role in the activities set forth above and in plaintiffs' Complaint, and because Duran's actions/inactions occurred during the ordinary course of Stuart & Clover's business, where Duran was a named partner, plaintiffs filed this instant action against Duran and Stuart & Clover.

II. Standard

Regarding the standard for determining whether to dismiss a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), the United States Supreme Court has held:

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. The plausibility standard is not akin to a "probability requirement," but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Where a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief.

Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (internal quotations and citations omitted). Further, “where the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged - but it has not shown - that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679 (internal quotations and citations omitted). Additionally, “[a] pleading that offers labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do. Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders naked assertion[s] devoid of further factual enhancement.” Id. at 678 (internal quotations and citations omitted). A court “must determine whether the complaint sufficiently alleges facts supporting all the elements necessary to establish an entitlement to relief under the legal theory proposed.” Lane v. Simon, 495 F.3d 1182, 1186 (10th Cir. 2007) (internal quotations and citation omitted). Further, “[a] court reviewing the sufficiency of a complaint presumes all of plaintiff’s factual allegations are true and construes them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.” Hall v. Bellmon, 935 F.2d 1106, 1109 (10th Cir. 1991).

Beyond the general federal pleading standard set forth in Iqbal, a plaintiff must also comply with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 9(b) and the heightened pleading standard for fraud. Dismissal of a claim for failure to meet the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b) is treated as a dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under Rule 12(b)(6). See Seattle–First Nat’l Bank v. Carlstedt, 800 F.2d 1008, 1011 (10th Cir. 1986). Rule 9(b) provides that “[i]n all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity.” Id. at 1010 n. 1.

The primary purpose of Rule 9(b) is to afford a defendant fair notice of the plaintiff’s claim and of the factual ground upon which it is based. See Farlow v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell &

Co., 956 F.2d 982, 987 (10th Cir. 1992). “At a minimum, Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff set forth the ‘who, what, when, where and how’ of the alleged fraud, and must set forth the time, place, and contents of the false representation, the identity of the party making the false statements and the consequences thereof.” U.S. ex rel. Sikkenga v. Regence Bluecross Blueshield, 472 F.3d 702, 726–27 (10th Cir. 2006).

III. Discussion

A. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

“Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction; they must have a statutory basis for their jurisdiction.” Morris v. City of Hobart, 39 F.3d 1105, 1111 (10th Cir. 1994). “[D]istrict courts shall have original jurisdiction where the matter in controversy . . . is between . . . citizens of different states” 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). The citizenship of a limited liability company depends upon the citizenship of its members.⁵ In the case at bar, Duran asserts that plaintiffs have failed to allege sufficient facts establishing diversity jurisdiction.

Having carefully reviewed plaintiffs’ Complaint and the parties’ briefs, the Court finds that plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged facts allowing the Court to exercise subject matter jurisdiction in this matter. Villasana and H&R allege that defendants are all citizens of Oklahoma. Villasana alleges he is a citizen of Mexico. Because H&R is deemed to have the same citizenship as its sole-member Villasana, a citizen of Mexico, H&R is likewise a citizen of Mexico for purposes of diversity jurisdiction analysis. Accordingly, because defendants do not

⁵ Although the Tenth Circuit has not specifically ruled with respect to the method of determining the citizenship of a limited liability company for purposes of diversity jurisdiction, every other circuit court that has addressed the question has determined that the citizenship of a limited liability company is the citizenship of its members. See Johnson v. Columbia Props. Anchorage, LP, 437 F.3d 894, 899 (9th Cir. 2006); Gen. Tech. Applications, Inc. v. Exro Ltda, 388 F.3d 114, 121 (4th Cir. 2004); GMAC Commercial Credit LLC v. Dillard Dep’t Stores, Inc., 357 F.3d 827, 828-29 (8th Cir. 2004); Rolling Greens MHP v. Comcast SCH Holdings, L.L.C., 374 F.3d 1020, 1022 (11th Cir. 2004); Belleville Catering Co. v. Champaign Mkt. Place, L.L.C., 350 F.3d 691, 692 (7th Cir. 2003); Handelsman v. Bedford Vill. Assocs. Ltd. P’ship, 213 F.3d 48, 51-52 (2d Cir. 2000).

challenge plaintiffs' allegations that plaintiffs are citizens of Mexico and defendants are citizens of Oklahoma, the Court finds that there is complete diversity present in this case.

B. Lack of Standing and Failure to State a Professional Negligence/Legal Malpractice Claim

Duran asserts that Villasana lacks standing to sue and fails to state a legal malpractice/professional negligence claim against him. Duran asserts that Villasana has failed to sufficiently allege that he has standing to sue for legal malpractice. Duran contends that Villasana lacks standing to sue for any breach and injury to H&R in connection with the alleged arbitration or registered service agent duties. Further, Duran asserts that H&R lacks standing to sue for alleged wrongs to Villasana personally.

Duran also contends that Villasana fails to state a legal malpractice/professional negligence claim against him. Specifically, Duran contends that claims relating to injuries to H&R such as allegations of failing to perform professionally in arbitration, mishandling funds derived from the arbitration, breach of duty by a registered service agent of H&R, and breach of duties owed by such an agent, can only be asserted by H&R. In addition, Duran contends H&R has no right to pursue claims relating to Villasana's loss of personal/real property, the divorce, or the POA from Villasana to his ex-wife.

Having carefully reviewed Villasana's Complaint, and presuming all of Villasana's factual allegations are true and construing them in the light most favorable to Villasana, the Court finds that Villasana, in his personal capacity, has standing to bring personal claims arising out of his alleged attorney-client relationship with Duran and has stated a claim for legal malpractice/professional negligence against Duran. For example, Villasana has alleged that Duran assisted Joyce in obtaining a fraudulent POA which she used, among other things, to obtain Villasana's personal and real property. In addition, Villasana has alleged that he engaged Duran, and Duran accepted, to help Villasana to revoke the POA and take other remedial measures to address Joyce's alleged fraudulent activities that resulted in the loss of Villasana's personal and real property. At this stage of the litigation, presuming all of plaintiffs' factual allegations are true and viewing them in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, the Court finds Villasana has alleged sufficient facts in regards to his legal malpractice/professional negligence claim to withstand Duran's motion to dismiss.

C. Failure to Allege Fraud with Particularity

Duran asserts that plaintiffs fail to allege fraud with the requisite particularity as required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). Having carefully reviewed plaintiffs' Complaint, and presuming all of plaintiffs' factual allegations are true and construing them in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, the Court finds that plaintiffs have pled fraud with the requisite particularity. As highlighted in the Introduction section above, the Court is satisfied that plaintiffs have provided Duran with sufficient details to apprise him of the alleged fraudulent activities involving the arbitration proceedings and mishandling of the funds derived from the arbitration; mishandling H&R's relationship with Landmark by allowing the warranty claim to lapse, failing to respond to Landmark's lawsuit resulting in judgment and default in the amount of $66,753.17, and failing to notify plaintiffs of these transactions; failing to carry out duties as a service agent of H&R; assisting Joyce with obtaining a fraudulent POA, which she used to embezzle, transfer, sell and liquidate H&R's property and Villasana's real and personal property; and other alleged fraudulent activities that allegedly took place with the assistance of Duran. Presuming these facts and the rest of the facts alleged in plaintiffs' Complaint are true and viewing them in the light most favorable to plaintiffs, the Court finds that Duran has received more than a fair notice of plaintiffs' fraud claim and of the factual ground upon which it is based. Accordingly, the Court finds that plaintiffs have pled fraud with the requisite particularity sufficient to withstand Duran's motion to dismiss.

IV. Conclusion

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, the Court DENIES defendant Duran's Motion to Dismiss [docket no. 8].

IT IS SO ORDERED this 1st day of April, 2015.
